Testing Overview

       When I tested the website among the different browsers, I noticed very little difference in how things like form fields, links, font, and color were rendered. The fonts were mostly consistent across the three different browsers, except I did notice a couple slight spacing differences between Edge and Opera. The links rendered consistently but it seems that the hover effect in Opera looks stronger than the others. For the most part, Variations between the browsers were small and didn't make a significant difference in the User Experience.